Sonja Makes 50 Look Great!

Red Sonja made her comics debut almost four decades ago at Marvel, but the sword-wielding heroine has found unprecedented success at Dynamite Entertainment, where she is about to reach the ripe old age of fifty (issues, not years)—a landmark reached by all too few comics recently!

To celebrate the character's fiftieth issue, Dynamite is returning to "legacy numbering" for this extra-sized 50th issue. As publisher Nick Barrucci explained, "Honestly, this was always the plan—to do something special for Red Sonja #50. Brian Reed's story was finishing with Sonja #49 and it seemed like a good way to mix it up a little. We knew we wanted to make it a 100 page book— and since we were at issue #50, we thought it would be cool to have 50 pages of new material and 50 pages of classic tales to pay homage to her history and to make it special for the fans.

"Marvel has done an excellent job with Spider-Man #600, Thor #600, and Huk #600, and we were inspired by what they had done. What we were fortunate enough to do was to put together a series of three stories. First is a story with Arvid Nelson and Pablo Marcos; Pablo is one of the classic Red Sonja artists, and Arvid has done a fantastic job on Thulsa Doom and Queen Sonja. Second, we were able to get Kevin McCarthy, who's done Tomb Raider stories with us in the past when we packaged with Top Cow; he's joined by John Desjardins (who we affectionately call 'Johnny D' in the office), who happened to be the protege of David Finch, so he's had an excellent teacher. And third, we tried someone new with Raven Gregory, and we were also to bring in Joyce Chin to draw his story. We've got some great covers by Art Adams and Joseph Michael Linsner. And as I mentioned, we're adding classic stories as Marvel did with Thor #600 and Spider-Man #600. Marvel's done a great job of making the anniversary issues mean more, so why not take our lead from one of the best companies in comics?"

In Arvid Nelson's tale, "an aging warlord and hunting enthusiast hires Sonja to help him track down a legendary mountain-dwelling tiger," the writer explained. "But Sonja has a secret reason for leading the hunt—a secret buried in the warlord's past." The story is set "earlier on in her life. She's been adventuring for a good many years, but her rise to power is still a long way away."

Does Nelson prefer Sonja as a sword- wielding loner, or as a queen who must deal with the demands of leadership? "I think Sonja was always meant to be a queen, but part of her will always be a wanderer. I love the intrigue of Sonja's court—figuring out how her kingdom works and who's trying to pull her strings. But it's very satisfying and rewarding to write a straight-up adventure story, too.

"Either way, though, Sonja tales require a lot of action. I mean, Sonja's got deep, emotional wounds, but she's not going to sit around and talk about them for pages on end. She's going to deal with things her way... and her way usually involves a lot of blood!"

Kevin McCarthy is also making his Sonja writing debut with #50, "but I've been following her adventures for years, and am a huge fan of the character," he said. "What interests me the most about Sonja is that she's a strong woman who's carved out a place for herself (with her sword as well as her smarts) in a decidedly savage age of man, and a 'male' genre of comics. For me, Red Sonja has always been more than just a Lady Conan in a metal brassiere, and the fact that the character has survived this long—and continues to thrive with Dynamite Entertainment—proves that I am not alone in this thinking."

"My story involves a curse and a frost giant," McCarthy said. "I didn't just want to shoe-horn Red Sonja into my original story, so when I rewrote it, I made sure her presence felt organic and would have an impact on the outcome. It's a stand-alone adventure that fits almost anywhere in Red Sonja's continuity—an evergreen in the vein of Mike Mignola's Hellboy one-shots, where Red Sonja crash lands in the middle of some crazy mythology come to life, solves a problem, fights a monster and wraps things up in the span of an issue, ready for more action.

"My story began quite a while ago, when I submitted my story to Dynamite for their Savage Tales anthology. Originally, my story was much shorter, and Red Sonja wasn't anywhere in it. Nick Barrucci liked the story well enough to ask me to add more pages—and, if possible, to add Red Sonja. I was delighted to oblige!

"This tale opens with Sonja entering a snowbound Viking port city hoping to book passage on a ship to further adventure. But the city is in the grip of an unnatural, perpetual winter, and no ships can leave until something is done about it. Red Sonja volunteers for the job, encountering along the way Viking toughs, doomed would-be giant-slayers, the titular curse, magic, blood, betrayal, and a frost giant. Red Sonja's intelligence and compassion come into play as much as her sword, and she will need all three if she's to break the frost giant's curse."

McCarthy said that he "would love another crack at Red Sonja, and I have a lot more ideas for 'done-in-one' adventures like 'Curse of the Frost Giant,' but there's nothing in the works right now. My hope is that will change after readers get a hold of Red Sonja #50!"

Raven Gregory is also quite enthused regarding his opportunity to chronicle Sonja's adventures. "It's my first Sonja story—and now that you've mentioned it, I'm feeling all adolescent nervous.... (Hoping she likes my hair, did I put on enough smell-good?) But seriously, I've been wanting to do a Red Sonja story for a long time and I think I had mentioned it to one of the editors over at Dynamite a while back, and for whatever reason they remembered....

"I absolutely love the character," Gregory continued. "The contrast of her being this incredibly beautiful, tragic woman who—instead of caving to the weight of her trauma—transforms herself into this flawless killing machine that lets no obstacle or opposing force stand in her way is what really gets me."

Gregory wanted to do a story that would be accessible to new readers. "I'm a big fan of stories that can be slotted in anywhere—not really continuity based, so that anyone picking up the story for the first time doesn't feel lost. This story takes place before Queen Sonja #1 in one of those moments when Red Sonja is without an entourage. The story follows Sonja as she comes upon a village ravaged by some pretty horrible beasties where only one lone survivor remains. Being who she is, Sonja decides to take vengeance on the creatures without fully knowing the whole story of what really happened there. Suffice to say, things aren't what they seem."

Like Kevin McCarthy, Gregory said that he would love to pay another visit to Sonja's world. "I have one Red Sonja story that's been clawing around in my mind for quite some time that I really want to tell," Gregory said. "One singular moment led to Red Sonja becoming who she is today. But in another reality, what if that one moment happened differently and that caused a massive ripple that instead of creating a good Red Sonja created an evil Dark Sonja? And what would happen if we transported our Red Sonja into the world of the evil Sonja? Every time I see Joe [Rybandt] from Dynamite, I give it a mention."

Barrucci confirmed that Red Sonja #50 "marks a permanent return of the Red Sonja title. We will be continuing it; it's one of our longest running titles and we wanted to reward fans who have been reading the title from the beginning, while creating an event to give more fans an opportunity to buy in. After #50, we're going to be working with New York Times best-selling novelist Peter Brett for the next story arc."

What happens with Queen Sonja from here--does it continue as well, or will it end to make room for Red Sonja's return? "Queen Sonja will continue from here," Barrucci said. "We're having fun with it; we've got a nice series of teams. We started with Joshua Ortega, then came Arvid Nelson, and we have a few other surprise writers coming on board, from mainstays to 'new blood.' I think fans will be enjoying both."

Additionally, Dynamite will commemorate Sonja's landmark issue with a companion volume, The Art of Red Sonja. "We've got enough great cover art to fill a few art books," Barrucci said. "We're picking quite a few of the covers that we've published since we started, and highlighting them in one book for fans to see. We do realize that most fans buy one cover every month to read the story, but those fans may want to see all the covers. After all, we've had everyone from the late, great Michael Turner to Joe Michael Linsner, Alex Ross, John Cassaday, Jim Lee, J.G. Jones, Art Adams, Frank Cho, Steve McNiven, and so many other great artists that the ability to showcase them all in one format was too good to pass up. There will be some new material, notes and comments on each cover so fans should really enjoy this. "

Fans who'd like to celebrate Sonja's 50th in three dimensions will appreciate Dynamite's Red Sonja Re-Sized Edition Michael Turner Statue, an affordably priced edition of the sold-out original. "We sold out of the statue when we released it years and ago, and we've been asked by fans to reissue it," Barrucci said. "We decided that, in this economy, reissuing it in a smaller size would be the way to go. This will the first in a line of smaller sized statues from Dynamite."

Red Sonja #50, a $4.99 comic, is slated for June release. The Art of Red Sonja, a $29.99 hardcover, follows in August. And the Red Sonja Re-Sized Edition Michael Turner Statue, affordably priced at $75.00, follows in October.
